1. I left the meeting at [Redacted] with a little more optimism, but a number of residual concerns. I assume you share those concerns. I propose that from now on Steering Committee meetings should be somewhat more substantive than they have been in the past. The PERT system that the CSPO has introduced ought to offer a means by which the Steering Committee can be brought up to date on where things stand relative to plan. I think a review of that at each meeting would be appropriate. We would also want to have highlighted where the schedule has been modified between meetings.

2. In addition, three concerns were highlighted for us there. They are: (1) performance and performance simulation, (2) user language specification, and (3) failure and recovery modes. We were promised that significant progress would be made on all of these soon. I believe that at the March meeting we should be briefed on where all of these issues stand. If you agree, let's ask the CSPO to cover these topics.
